Aim of the ESSSB symposia is to promote research in the field of suicidology, by sharing insights and expertise and enhancing collaboration between all professionals involved in the field. Anyone looking to advance their understanding of suicidal behaviour and to improve the effectiveness of suicide treatment and prevention should attend ESSSB symposia.

Basic components of studies on suicide (research, prevention, treatment) have undergone consistent progress, but given the peculiar nature of each one, their mutual dialogue and definitive exchange has proved to be scarce.

Sharing the common spirit of all ESSSB symposia, the 13th ESSSB aims at investigating possible modalities and paths of communication of these instances, favoring aggregation and interplay not only of single minds, but also at a more complex level of structurization of suicidology, with the ultimate scope of harmonizing its articulate development.

ESSSB 13 is held under the auspices of the International Association for Suicide Prevention.

The second conference announcement, with full details and the call for submissions, will be available in Spring 2009.
